

October 6 University
Faculty of Economics & Management
Economics Program

Economics Program mission

The Program Seeks to Prepare Distinguished Graduates and Provide Them with Educational, Research and Professional Services in the Fields of Economics To Prepare Competitive Competencies And to Contribute to Strengthening the Economy And Sustainable National Development in A Renewed, Inspiring Environment That Activates Research, Innovation and Partnership

Economics Program Objectives

The first goal

Emphasizing the quality of education in the department

The second goal

Raising the merit, competitiveness, and professionalism of students

The third goal

Support and encourage scientific and applied research and innovation to promote sustainable development

The fourth goal

Enhancing community service and local partnership with the business sector

General specifications for a graduate of the Economics program

The program aims for the graduate to be able to:
First: Knowledge And Understanding

◆ A deep and comprehensive understanding of the specialty: The graduate understands, explains, and applies the basic principles, theories, and concepts related to the field of economics.

Second: Skills

◆ Effective personality skills: The graduate of the economics program possesses effective communication skills (verbal and written).

◆ Analytical and problem-solving skills: A graduate of the economics program has the ability to analyse, evaluate, and solve problems related to economic sciences.

◆ Skills in using information technology: The graduate of the economics program possesses the skills in using databases and information technology.

Third: Values, independence, and responsibility:

◆ Career and leadership readiness: A graduate of the economics program has the ability to work effectively within a team and can create a positive impact in the work environment.

◆ Familiarity with professional ethics: The graduate of the economics program possesses academic integrity, the ethics of the specialty, and the ethics of the profession for which he qualifies, and participates in finding constructive solutions to societal issues, and is committed to responsible citizenship